Here's hoping for a general cleaning and tidying up of all places of business, and homes. Clean up those fire hazards, making 1952 surpass all Fire Prevention Weeks in previous years.

Yours truly,

Tricks for Tomatoes

Do you find you still have a large quantity of green tomatoes that won't possibly ripen before a frost? Even if they have been caught by the first light frost they can be used.

"Mature greens"—those about to turn color and often with a white spot around the blossom end—will ripen at cool temperatures (55-70 degrees F) in either sunlight or shade. Spread them out in the attic or in the porch if not too cold. Or line them up on the window sill if the room is not too warm.

"Immature" green tomatoes won't ripen and are likely to rot if kept too long. It is best to use these as soon after picking as possible. While not as rich in Vitamin C as when ripe, green tomatoes are still considered a valuable source of Vitamin C.

Some ways to use green tomatoes:

1. Fry or boil them by cutting in 1/4 inch slices, dip in beaten egg, then flour or bread crumbs and cook until tender and brown. Sprinkle with grated cheese if desired.

2. Quarter and add with other vegetables to meat stew.

3. Stuff green tomatoes with buttered bread crumbs, top with cheese and bake—or scallop, alternating layers of tomatoes and breadcrumbs and top with grated cheese.

Other ways in which green tomatoes may be used are in—green tomato marmalade, green tomato mince meat cookies, and mince meat fruit cake filled green tomatoes, green tomato relish and tomato sheets "Green Tomato Recipes."

Helpful Hints for Harried Housewives

For hard to open screw type jars, wrap an elastic band around lid several times. This will give you a firm grip.

If tassels present a washing problem, comb them out before washing, and secure ends with string. This will avoid tangles.

When the tip comes off the youngster's shoelace, use clear nail polish to stiffen the end. Saves time and temper in the morning struggle of dressing.

A bit of baby oil rubbed on the baby's face before feeding will make face washing easier. Some baby cereals harden like plaster, and all babies hate forceful scrubbing.

It's Better to Buy at Home

A Higher Standard

WHEN LARGE NUMBERS of citizens were undergoing physical examinations for entry into the armed services during the last war, it was found that many Canadians were suffering from malnutrition. This discovery led to a further study of the matter in various parts of the country and these investigations showed that in spite of the fact that Canada is known throughout the world as a land of plenty, there were many cases of malnutrition and of other diseases resulting from poor nutrition. At that time the country was emerging from a long depression and no doubt that factor had some bearing on the situation.

Report Tells Of Advance

It was found, however, that all those suffering from the effects of improper diet did not come from families with low incomes, and that lack of knowledge regarding food values was partly responsible for the situation. Since that time much effort has been put into raising nutrition standards throughout the country. Minimum diet requirements have been made known to the people through the press, radio, various government departments, welfare agencies and other bodies interested in the well-being of the people, and no doubt this is at least partly responsible for the fact that Canadians are now eating more food, and food of better quality than they were in the years before the Second World War.

Increase Has Been Noted

A recent report by the Federal Department of Agriculture shows that the per capita expenditure of food in Canada in 1935 was $73, while in 1951 this figure was $245. The report adds that between 1935 and 1951 the expenditure for food per person increased by 236 per cent, while the cost of food in the same period increased by 150 per cent. Thus while prices increased considerably the rise in prices did not account entirely for the amount spent on food. The general rise in income and employment levels doubtless accounts in part for the advance in living standards in the last seventeen years. Whatever the cause, it is obvious that Canadians are living better, and that as a result standards of health have no doubt risen to more satisfactory levels.

Railways Have Placed 4,500 More Box Cars To Haul Grain

WINNIPEG.—Canadian railways have placed 4,500 more boxcars in the western grain haul than were engaged in the same work last season. Under load, the additional boxcars will handle upwards of 8,000,000 bushels of wheat, railway officials said. Build-up of extra car supply needed to handle this year's expected record crops on the prairies began several months ago, officials said. As soon as it became "reasonably certain" what the size of the western crops would be, they said, the extra cars were allotted and began rattling into the Prairie provinces from all divisions along the two big railway lines. Some 50,000 boxcars already were in the west, including those set for the grain haul. Both Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways have big diesel programs under way, with many pressed into service for the grain haul.

For the most part, these diesels are on yard service, switching in big marshalling centres such as Winnipeg and the Lakehead.

Diesels involved in regular grain hauls will carry loads of about 25 cars more than steam locomotives. An added feature is that they don't stop so often for servicing.

Officials are optimistic about this year's movement. They said they can move the Prairie crop to the terminals "just as fast as they can unload our cars."

Find Head-Hunters Of Amazon Friendly

LIVERPOOL, Eng.—Sebastian Snow, 23-year-old adventurer who claims to have discovered the source of the Amazon, reports that he found South America's dread head-hunters quite friendly when they were not drunk.

He told reporters on returning from a 10-month raft trip down the big river that he doesn't believe the stories about bloodthirsty Amazon natives. "I never had any difficulty with them," he said. "When they were drunk on chicha, a drink they make themselves, they were not quite so friendly."

Snow travelled 3,500 miles down the Amazon to its mouth. Diamonds used in fine glass engraving firms wear out from use in six to eight weeks.

Nine Duck Eggs Hatched By Woman Under Armpits

BERLIN.—An East German woman hatched nine duck eggs under her armpits.

The newspaper De Morgen reported that the woman who lives in the village of Boeset got in bed with 11 duck eggs under her armpits because the hen supposed to hatch them had "gone on strike."

Two days later nine ducklings appeared. One of the eggs failed to hatch; the other broke.

Add ¾ c. lukewarm water and 1 tsp. salt. Add, all at once, 3½ c. one-sifted bread flour and work in with the hands; work in 3 lbs. soft shortening. Knead on lightly-floured board until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl. Cover with a damp cloth and set in warm place, free from draft. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Remove pan of water from oven and bake the rolls in steam-filled oven for ½ hour, broiling them with cold water and sprinkling lightly with cornmeal after the first 15 mins., and again brushing them with cold water 2 minutes before removing baked buns from the oven. Yield—18 rolls.

Modern Touch

Funny and Otherwise

She—Remember me? Years ago you asked me to marry you. Absent-minded professor—Ah, yes, indeed—And did you?

They were canoeing in the starlight. "How bright the stars are tonight," he said. "Almost as bright as—"

"Oh, you flatterer!" she ejaculated. "As they were last night," he continued, calmly.

"Yes," said Mrs. Sharp to a neighbor, "she's accustomed to being master in her own house. In her first husband's will the same thing he bequeathed to her was his trousers press."

A recent moon shows a housewife at the meat counter telling the butcher "It's been ages since I could fit it in my budget, so the name eludes me... but this may help—you smother it with onions."

A man asked his doctor, quite frankly what was wrong with him. "Well," said the doctor, "you eat too much, drink too much and you're terribly lazy." "Thanks," the patient replied, "but would you be kind enough to put that in Latin? Then I can have a week off from the office."

A certain author was noted for his unpleasant books. He was at a literary party and an acquaintance, a dignified type of man, asked him how he was.

"Oh," said the author, "I've not been feeling so well lately. Had some stomach upset." "Really!" said the other. "Something you wrote, no doubt."

A man was telling about a movie he saw on television that was really bad. "Who was the hero?" somebody asked him. "I was," he said, "I stuck with it to the finish."

Doctor: "Well, Mrs. Smith, did you give your husband the sleeping powder I ordered?" Mrs. Smith: "Yes, doctor. You said as much as would cover a threepenny bit, but as I hadn't one I used three pennies. He's still asleep."

Former Relief Areas Of Alberta Now Prosperous

"Special Areas" of East-Central of Province Now Have Rural Population of 12,552

(By the Canadian Press)

Fourteen years ago much of the population of east-central Alberta was burdened with debt and harassed by soil erosion and drought. Today these same districts, which now make up the province's Special Areas, support a thriving population of grain farmers, ranchers and mixed farmers.

From 1931 to 1934, residents in the areas received direct relief of almost $1,000,000. In 1951, total direct relief to the same population was little more than $5,000.

The Special Areas now cover 264 townships and have a rural population of 12,552, a figure constant for the last six years.

The Special Areas were organized to assist farmers and ranchers financially and to control settlement in the traditionally dry regions. One of the first phases of the program was government-assisted depopulation to a point where the remaining farmers and ranchers would have enough land to make their operations successful.

From 1936 to 1938, economic aid water surveys were made and the lands were divided into three major classifications—sub-marginal land suitable only for grazing, marginal land suitable for combination grazing and wheat production, and land suitable for wheat production.

Today, 2,000,000 acres of the 6,000,000 acres in the Special Areas are privately owned and about $700,000 of the remaining acres are leased from the government or used as community pasture.

The larger percentage of rural population is engaged in mixed farming, with 2,730 listed in 1951. The average holding is 1,500 acres, while 110 residents have holdings of 10,000 acres or more.

In 1939 the program introduced water development, regrassing of abandoned lands, and allowed grazing rentals on the basis of carrying capacity of the land. More than 500,000 pounds of free created wheat grass and brome grass were distributed by the government.

At one time, grain harvested at Cereal, in the heart of the Special Areas, was considered the finest in Canada. If irrigation is introduced to this dry belt, and the possibility exists, the Special Areas of Alberta may become leading producers of prize grain in the province.

Doris Slapped Flies And Made $5.00

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Doris Lott slapped flies and made $5. It happened while the civilian worker at Kelly Air Force Base visited her parents at Cameron, Texas. They went to a cattle auction where the flies were thick.

Doris started slapping at them. The auctioneer took each slap to mean a bid on a calf.

Finally the calf was led over to Doris, who was informed her bid was $35. When he learned she didn't want the calf, the auctioneer sold it for her for $40 and Doris got the $5 difference.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

THE BRIDGE

The Bridge—the Inspector Had a Deep Affection for It. Indirectly He Owed What Success He Had.

By R. G. HANLEY

THE double chain of lights, divided by darkness, was London Bridge. "Interesting bridge that, Gentlemen," our host said. "In its day, every cross-section of our life has passed over it. It treats both wealth and poverty, life and death with equal indifference. I have a deep affection for it. Indirectly because of it I owe what little success I've had."

We murmured in reply to his modesty.

One by one we took our seats. The Inspector relaxed back into the well-worn leather chair. The light from the fireplace restlessly painted the paneled walls.

"I've always lived in sight of it and some forty odd years ago it definitely altered my life. At that time I was hardly a respected member of society. I was pretty useless."

"One warm July night, finding sleep unobtainable, I dressed and strolled casually across the bridge. The usual people were there—charwomen, lovers, and two drunks singing lustily as they staggered on arm in arm."

"Half way over, in a niche formed by a buttress of masonry, I noticed a young woman looking over the rail. A respectably dressed young woman doesn't belong there at two o'clock."

A sure suicide, I thought. Not much anyone can do though. If I stop her now she can always use some other method or find some more convenient place. Still, I felt I just had to try. Since that day I've investigated a great many such cases and usually my observations of that night have proven correct."

"I crossed the street and approached quietly. She was too preoccupied to notice me. 'Good evening, Miss,' I broke in. She started, and she turned towards me and the light. I saw her soft brown hair and the beauty of her face that shone through her grief."

"The river is interesting at night, isn't it? A great place for lovers and potential suicides." She noticed the cynical infection I had carefully placed on the word lovers.

"She started to protest my interference in her affairs. 'Oh, no, Miss I don't mean you, I was referring to myself,' I said, cutting her short. "I thought then that I could feel all the warmth and sympathy in her reach out to me. 'It's silly of me, Miss, to be talking to you, but I guess a little time doesn't matter now I've made up my mind. I can always find another spot or another method. There are so many exits."

"She remained silent, hearing me out, and I was sure she was forming arguments in her mind to stop me. You see, Miss, I've lost everything that was near and dear to me. My son, whom I adored, died of the flu this spring; and then my wife ran away. Since then I've lost my job and this coming Monday I must pay or vacate my lodgings. I'm not a coward but there seems no reason to go on."

"Gentlemen, I realized then that the acting world had lost something when I hadn't joined it; but as I went on with my tale of woe certain truths emerged and I realized how close I myself was to this selfsame bridge. Only the wife and son were imagination."

"The log in the fireplace broke with a shower of light and I saw the Inspector's poised face. The light glinted on his iron grey hair."

"She spoke for the first time when I had finished and her sight to save my life was something I shall never forget. She used the very arguments that I knew would fail if I had tried them on her."

"Quite instinctively we started to walk and with the innocence of a child she linked her arm in mine. One more memory of that night I shall never forget."

"We walked without purpose until we saw an all-right restaurant. Inside she told me her name was Ellen Chalmers and that she had no one in the world except a maiden aunt whom she disliked. Until recently she was a governess. Then she confessed to me she had come like myself to the bridge to throw herself over."

"You see, Mr. Clements," she said, "my life was turned upside down in an hour. I loved my employer's son, my duties were easy and my life secure and sheltered. One day, about a month ago, my master's wife flew into a jealous rage. She accused me of flirting with her husband. I denied it and later so did he, but it was clear I must leave. She insisted that he give me some compensation and I took a job without them. After hearing all you have been through, Mr. Clements, I feel like a dreadful coward. My troubles are so small in comparison."

"We walked back across the bridge. Before I left her at her room she begged me not to do anything until I saw her again. We arranged to meet the next day."

"The next morning was the turning point for me. I applied for a position at Scotland Yard. Although it would take time they gave me some encouragement and I knew I would make it. My useless existence was behind me. I also knew that Ellen Chalmers never again visited the bridge for that purpose."

"How do you know?" I asked. The Inspector hesitated, and the door opened admitting a little white-haired lady carrying a plate of sandwiches. She smiled at the Inspector and I could see she had once been very beautiful.

"Gentlemen," said the Inspector, "this is Ellen, my wife."

Father's Story Has To Be Good

The biggest attraction at the current radio show in London's Earl Court is the television—a telephone that teleports the image of the person at the other end. A word of caution to the user, however—when dad phones mother to say he is working late, he had better be at the office when he is making the call.—Central Press Canadian.

Recipe

ORANGE CAKE

A very fine example of a true orange cake—light, moist and tender; assemble it with your choice of filling and frosting (orange, lemon, chocolate, 7-minute, and so forth).

2½ cups once-sifted pastry flour or 2 cups once-sifted all-purpose flour

3 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder ½ teaspoon salt

11 tablespoons butter or Blue Bonnet Margarine

1 cup granulated sugar

2 eggs, well beaten

2 teaspoons grated orange rind ½ cup milk

1 teaspoon vanilla

¼ teaspoon almond extract ¼ cup strained orange juice

Grease an 8-inch square cake pan and line bottom with greased paper. Preheat oven to 350 deg. F. (moderate).

Sift flour, Magic Baking Powder and salt together three times.

Cream butter or margarine; gradually blend in sugar. Add well-beaten eggs part at a time, beating well after each addition; mix in orange rind.

Measure milk and add vanilla and almond extract.

Add flour mixture to creamed mixture at a quarter at a time, alternating with two additions of milk and one addition of orange juice and commoner egg whites.

Turn into prepared pan. Bake in preheated oven about 45 minutes.

Fisherman's Wife Has Hair-Raising Experience With Bear

WINNIPEG.—What would you do if you were a woman alone at night with a drunk bear in your house and you hadn't fired a gun in 30 years? Mrs. Jake Skibinski, whose husband is a commercial fisherman on Seine bay at the eastern end of Ratny Lake, Ont., 200 miles east of Winnipeg, had to figure that one out.

The lone woman had a hair-raising experience, but finally succeeded in killing the unwanted guest with the fourth shot from her husband's rifle.

The story was related at Fort Frances by Mr. Skibinski, who said he left his wife alone at their Seine bay camp for five days while he visited Chicago on business. On his return, he found Mrs. Skibinski in a state of shock after an adventure which lasted the full five days.

Mr. Skibinski had shot a 500-pound-plus bear earlier but could not find the second marauder he knew was around. When he left, he advised his wife to poison the animal with wood-alcohol if it bothered her. Mrs. Skibinski was unfamiliar with either the 30-30 rifle or shotgun owned by her husband.

When the bear, a young one weighing an estimated 200 pounds, came into her yard, Mrs. Skibinski threw bins food to keep him away from her house. But the more food he was given, the bolder he became, until finally he was sitting on the doorstep.

URBAN POPULATION OF ALBERTA NOW MORE THAN RURAL

EDMONTON.—Alberta's urban population finally has out-stripped the rural population.

A study of 1951 census figures disclosed that Alberta's urban population is 488,188. This is 51.96 per cent. of the provincial population. Alberta's rural population was given as 451,313, or 48.04 per cent. of the provincial total.

ANOTHER SAVINGS ISSUE

The fact that there is soon to be placed before the public the 7th issue of Canada Savings Bonds Series is most encouraging, a proof of their soundness, and an incentive for citizens to take part in the Dominion's financial move, while at the same time receiving a substantial rate of interest on their investment.

With an average yield of 3.44 per cent, if held to maturity, this issue will be obtainable from Banks, Investment Dealers, and Trust or Loan Companies. Your order can be placed with your employer if you so wish, when regular deductions to cover it will be made from your salary over a period of 12 months. This we feel is an easy and encouraging way for the average person to save on a real sound investment. Furthermore should the occasion arise when you are pressed for ready money, these bonds are immediately redeemable.

as a rule

are good sports...

You can be a good sport too, by following the Golden Rule, and making a friend of the farmer.

1. First call on him and obtain his permission to shoot or hunt on his property.
2. Always close gates behind you, they were put there for a purpose.
3. Don't shoot, unless you are sure of your bullet's ultimate resting place. You could miss.
4. Don't shoot near buildings or stock.
5. Don't climb through fences with a loaded gun.
6. AND NEVER carry a loaded gun in a vehicle.

Shooting insulators on power or telephone lines—thus interrupting farmers' power or telephone service—is NOT following the Golden Rule.

You will find the farmer a real good sport if you are a good sportsman and follow the rules of good sportsmanship.
